

About AVG

AVG ensures your safety while you search or surf the net, download music, documents and pictures, send emails or instant message by scanning documents, files, Web pages and Web links before you open them. AVG Internet Security is a reliable and easy-to-use solution for home and small office users.

You may already use AVG Internet security products at home, but may not have come across any of the business applications. Some points to consider for purchasing the product to protect your systems from the constant threat when using the internet.

- All AVG products offer a TWO year licence as standard, which generally works out cheaper than most of the other products on the market. Others only offer a ONE year licence.
- Unlike some other internet security software, the product is very light on the system so just runs in the background and is generally very unobtrusive.
- With AVG, all system upgrades are free of charge. So when you have paid for the product; there are no additional hidden charges or fees. This means no matter how many times the product is upgraded until the next licence renewal; there is nothing else to pay.
- The platforms it supports are of course Windows (including 64-bit), but also Cisco and Linux.
- AVG offers scalability to all sizes of networks.
- Internet security includes Exchange anti-spam.
- Keeps users and servers running smoothly.
- Offers comprehensive protection against viruses, spyware, poisoned web pages, phishing attacks, spam, infected downloads and IM transfers, and hacker attacks.

Discounts of 50% can be requested by the following:
